

Group Project 3 - Storefront Final Presentation

Team Name: The Golden Snubs

Team Members: Hansaint Noto, Carlos Posadas, Abdurrehman Aslam, Ghazi Harara

Description:

- Your goal is to "code" your website design in HTML (4 or 5), with everything you want, front and back end.
- This is building on your prior submissions. And I want you to be able to present your site (screen share) by class time on Tuesday & Thursday the 16th and 18th of May.

Approach/ what we did:

- The way we approached this was first by separating who was going to work on which sections of the storefront and splitting the work of the sites.
- Aslam: Payment page, checkout page, and Cart page
- Hansaint: Home Page, Menswear Page, Womenswear Page
- Carlos: Ads/Campaign page, Search Page, System/preferences Page
- Ghazi: FAQ Page, About Page, Contact Page
- Everyone: Polish the site

Issues and Resolutions:

- Hansaint: One of the issues I had was trying to make a hover effect on the images with their proper description in CSS. I wanted a specific effect of the image zooming in and my main issue was that it expanded outside of the given border when it hovered over the image itself. I had a different class defined for this and found that that was the main issue regarding it overlapping within its borders.
- Carlos: For my section, I had reworked all the functionality of my pages when it came to the System preferences and the search page. For the buttons to change your email and password I had both of them only linked to the registration page at that time so after our last presentation we had made a reset password page and linked it to the correct buttons' functions. For the dark mode, I hadn't been able to keep the dark mode on when you reload the page, so I have figured that using local storage to store the user's data for when they choose dark mode will stay on until they click the button again.
- Abdurrehman: Working on the final version of this website, I worked on a couple of things, made all sites have an identical style, and worked on validations for most of the things the user has to enter. Lastly, the server-side validation through PHP. Most of my time was spent working on the PHP for the registration site, which included validations and getting data from the server. I tried to start the MySQL database. However, I needed help moving past the first hurdle, creating tables. So, I worked on the other parts of the sites. The problem I encountered most was validating and stopping the user from registering without entering the correct information in the valid format.

- Ghazi: For the final version of the website I devoted all of my time into trying to make the Contact Page functional and actually send emails when the submit button was hit. To that end I created a separate php file that would do several things, it would set where the messages from the contact page would be funneled to, in this case I just used my own personal email ghaziharara@gmail.com for the sake of simplicity. I also set up formatting using the "$headers" tag to keep consistency in how the emails would be presented in my email. and finally I setup an if-else statement indicating that if the message was sent successfully or unsuccessfully there would be a message on screen that reflects that. I had a substantial amount of issues and problems ranging from constantly getting 405 errors to constantly getting 403 errors, which may have been an issue that I created while setting up on the server side of things but dealing with these issues still ate through a lot of time and energy. Ultimately the contact page is operating on a "hit or miss" kind of success rate which is not what I wanted but I learned a lot about how I would be making contact style pages in the future. I also was able to increase my knowledge of php which was and is still lacking but less than it was before. Overall I am proud of the work I put into the contact page despite all the problems and issues.
